רטטנדע.

From the N. Y. Evening Post. " Our little Boys in Surplices."

Oh! we've heard enough of "the boys in gray;" And "the boys in blue " have had their day, And now I submit that it's orthodox quite, To speak a few words for our boys in white; Those nice little fellows in surplices.

nn O.

How sweetly they look as they stand in a row, With each dear little mouth rounded just like

And their cheeks all aflame, as they strain at the notes, Which rise to the skies from their pure little throats! Those good little boys in surplices.

Men's voices and women's are all well enough To sing about love, or some other such stuff;

But, to fill a high church with melodious noise, You may trust to my word there is nothing like Like our own little boys in surplices.

Tis true, there are worshippers, "squeamish" And who roundly complain, with a shrug and a sigh That the little boy's voices are rather too 'high' In spite of the weight of the suplies.

Now, really, such people are naught but a scan-dal;

We can't have a mass, and we can't light a candle, But some one objects to those innocent joys, And now they're attacking our poor little boys; Those sweet little darlings in surplices.

VI You may pile up your pillows, ye merciless crew! But our babies shall never be smothered by you; For their "Tower" is proof against all that an-

And we'll fight to the last, for our "Trinity boys; "

Flushing Bay, Oct. 10, 1868, Ten Years of Prudence.

Our little pet chair in surplices.

My Uncle Oliver took me into his place. An importer of dry goods Uncle
